Bank Leeway, Hedges Give Energy Companies Breathing Room

April 20, 2015

The impact of falling oil prices, and hence the opportunities for distressed investing, differs so widely from company to company that it's hard to generalize. In this interview with Bloomberg Brief Oil Buyer's Guide, SRZ partner David J. Karp and former Schulte lawyer Kirby Chin discuss how the fallout will extend beyond energy companies to banks and real estate investors in production areas. The interview also covers current themes in the energy M&A space and activity in the distressed energy sector.
