

PUBLICATIONS

Is Moench the End of the Road for Employer ‘Stock Drop’ Claims? The ERISA ‘Stock Drop’ Framework Following the Second Circuit’s Adoption of the Moench Presumption in In re: Citigroup ERISA Litigation

January 9, 2012

Federal courts have seen a large number of so-called “stock drop” cases from employees asserting that defined contribution plan sponsors and fiduciaries are liable for permitting allegedly imprudent investment in company stock. Much of this litigation has focused on the possible application of the “Moench presumption” to defendants’ actions. The presumption heightens the standard for federal courts to apply when reviewing the conduct of ERISA plan sponsors and fiduciaries and makes it easier for stock-drop defendants to get claims against them dismissed.

Related People

Mark Brossman

Partner
New York

Ronald Richman

Partner
New York

Practices

EMPLOYMENT AND EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

Attachments

[!\[\]\(c50c8b7b2cc2cf9ff925edec0ee94c0d_img.jpg\) Download Article](#)