Ronald Richman Discusses Narrowing the Skills Gap on TheStreet

March 7, 2014

The U.S. unemployment rate remains elevated, deepening the concern that job seekers lack skills for the evolving economy. In this video, SRZ employment & employee benefits partner Ronald E. Richman talks to TheStreet's Joe Deaux about how the evolution in technology allows companies to hire fewer employees, but many sectors have job demand the market can't fill. While this appears to be a large structural problem, Ron discusses how individuals will adjust to the market and acquire the necessary skills in a generation.
